Dear readers,

The autumn cold has reached Denmark. So it’s good to know of forthcoming anthropological and documentary festivals that can bring one indoors in warm cinema theatres.!

In this volume we bring you announcements of festivals in Estonia, Russia and Croatia. But please also take a look at the calendar to find a long list of festivals in late 2012 and in 2013.

In addition you’ll find news from CVA with information on interesting panels at the 17th IUAES Congress in Manchester, that will take place from August 5 -10, 2013.

As always, we bring news and announcements in the Notice Board towards the end of this volume, and then, finally, the Calendar.

Deadline for the next volume is DECEMBER 5, 2012.
News from the Commission on Visual Anthropology (CVA)

By Metje Postma (POSTMAM@FSW.leidenuniv.nl, Chairman of the CVA)

17th IUAES CONGRESS 2013
Manchester, August 5-10, 2013

17th IUAES Congress in Manchester
The panels for the 2013, 17th IUAES Congress in Manchester, that will take place from the 5th till the 10th of August have been formed, and abstracts have been submitted. The convenors of the panels have selected the participants, and it promises to be an inspiring and diverse meeting!

The Visual Anthropology track that is one programme in the huge offer of specialised panels that will be part of the Congress, will consist of 8 panels and an exhibition for photography and multi-media installations. The latter will be a novelty in the history of the Congress.

You can read the description of the panels on the IUAES Manchester website:

The panels will be:

- Visual encounters: audiovisual approaches to anthropological knowledge
- Establishing academic standards of evaluation for non-literary forms of representation in anthropology
- The use of audio-visual media in ethnographic research: a Latin American perspective
- Photography as mediation of anthropological knowledge
- Anthropological visions, atlases of difference, multimedia arcades and non-linear arguments.
- Photography as a research method
- Representing the Non-representable: Visual Representations of Extraordinary Beings in Ethnographic Films
- Exhibition: photography as a research method and multimedia installations.
- Ethnographic films made by women about women: is there a feminist visual anthropology?

Parallel to the panels, film screenings will be held that will be convened by colleagues from 4 area’s and continents: China, West Africa, Japan and Latin America. There will be a wide range of possibilities to share and view audiovisual productions outside the panels, that will be made possible through the cooperation with the Granada Centre for Visual Anthropology.

The program will be closed by a Forum discussion around the presentation of a manifesto in which we propose ways of coping with non-literary anthropological representations in the academic environment. The manifesto will be addressed to university staffs and research-councils worldwide and will be written and prepared in advance, and made accessible on the IUAES Manchester website before the start of the Congress! Through it, we hope to support all Visual Anthropologists and students, in finding internationally agreed upon standards to evaluate their non-literary outcomes of research as academic works.
Worldfilm 2013 - call for entries

Submissions call for the official programme of the 10th Worldfilm documentary film festival

Dear colleagues and friends, we are glad to open the submissions call for the official program of the 10th Worldfilm festival to be held at March 18th-24th 2013 in Tartu, Estonia.

Worldfilm festival screens documentaries and creative documentaries which are dealing with cultural diversity and representation as well as a wide range of social issues.

With about 6000 viewers and about 50 films in our festival program, our festival fits perfectly into the small University town of Tartu in Estonia, being each year attended by knowledgeable and curious film directors from all over the world, but also other industry professionals, as well as friendly and supporting festival audience. It has become a long awaited meeting point to all of them.

This year our deadline for film submissions is October 15th, but in case of expected World premiere, negotiations for including the films can be made up to the beginning of December. After that we will announce our final selection of films for the official main program

The festival has no competition program. We also do not charge entry fees nor provide screening fees.

When submitting a film for preview, you are welcome to submit two copies of a film instead of the usual one copy, in order to make sure, our program team will be watching your film sooner and more conveniently.

With any further questions, please contact us at festival@worldfilm.ee.

Yours,

Pille Runnel,
director of the festival

8th Russian Anthropological Film Festival and the “Multinational Russia” Forum

Dear film-makers, film-viewers and other participants of the Russian Anthropological Film Festival!

RFAF was organized as biennale and during its 20 years history was comfortable with this rhythm. The attempt to make it annual encountered several yet unsolved financial and organizational problems. That’s why the RFAF team has made a reverse decision to keep the previous format of biennale and to hold the next VIII RFAF in the spring of 2013.

All films sent for selection will be considered by the festival committee for participation in the RFAF–2013 program. The dates scheduled in regulations for RFAF–2012 are prolonged for a year. The deadline for submission of the films is 14.01.2013. The date of the announcement of the content of the festival program is March 1, 2013. We appreciate your understanding. We look forward to seeing you in 2013 at the VIII RFAF.

Sincerely,
Ivan Golovnev, RFAF program-director

Anthropological films are the films about peoples and cultures, religions and rituals, friends and enemies; about the meaning of ‘I’ and ‘we’; about the national character and the cultural heritage. This means in addition to accounts of trips to exotic countries also the anthropology of a street, the anthropology of a metropolis, or the anthropology of power expressed via the language of cinematography. This is the intellectual cinema where the very simple and the most complex themes intertwine in their real-life human intricacy. This is the cinematographic study of Man in his awareness of himself. The anthropological film is the combination of the magic of cinematographic expression and the scientific knowledge.

- RAFF is the only full scale competitive anthropological film festival in Russia.
- RAFF is an open, i.e. international film festival where film directors from all over the world are represented.
- RAFF is the festival of the young, because it is organized by the Ural Federal University.
- RAFF is a bridge between art and science, as the film festival is accompanied by an academic forum.
- RAFF is a dialogue between cultures and peoples, the forum of interethnic and inter-confessional communication, the festival of beauty and dignity.
- RAFF is an experimental platform for the search of new cinematographic forms, a synthetic language of image-word-sound.

The festival organized by the Ural Federal University and the Ethnographic Bureau with the support of the Institute of History and Archeology of the UrB RAS and the Ural branch of the Union of Cinematographers of the Russian Federation brings together the directors of anthropological films, the television, radio and other mass media professionals, the researchers (anthropologists, ethnographers, historians, philologists, art historians, experts in folklore and cinematography), representatives of ethnic and religious communities, the intellectuals and the undergraduate students around the key formula of the festival-forum: “Art + Science”.

The decisions on the Festival Awards will be made by a professional jury, the sponsors and the audience of the festival.

The format of the Festival will be slightly changed this time – in the spring of 2013 it will become the forum of projects and not of papers as before. We invite for participation in the Forum all authors/managers of ethnic projects in the fields of fine arts, media, music, fashion, design, brands, tourism, public initiatives, and politics. A project may be presented at the Forum by a team of project developers/participants.

The deadline for the submission of applications for participation in the anthropological films competition and the research forum is January 14, 2013.

We invite everybody willing to participate in the creative agenda or act as sponsors of the festival to contact us at the RAFF Organizing Committee:

ETNOFilm Croatia 2012: Call for entries

The ethnographic film festival, ETNOFILm Croatia is pleased to announce opening submission for the competitive part of 5th edition of the festival. The Festival will be held in Rovinj from 24-27th April 2013 and organized by the Ethnographic Museum of Istria. Submissions are free and open for films with innovative and analytical approach to cultures and societies. Four categories in which films can be submitted speak about our orientation towards professional ethnology/anthropology on one hand and on the other of the openness toward interdisciplinary research. Besides film author’s appearances, we are organizing a digital visual anthropology workshop (hypermedia), animation workshops for children lectures given by prominent scholars, round table, concert and exhibition. Submitted films must have been completed after year 2008. Please download the application at http://www.etnofilm.com/en/download/

GJSS Call for Articles: Visual Methods & Activism / Academia

Hello everyone,

This is a reminder that the Graduate Journal of Social Science is calling for contributions (articles, position papers and book reviews) for our March 2013 regular edition on the topic of 'Visual Methodologies' and the June 2013 special edition entitles 'The Conditions of Praxis: Theory and Practice in Activism and Academia.' Both calls for papers are attached!

The deadline for both of these calls for papers is Wednesday 31st of October 2012.

Email GJSS editors Alexa Athelstan and Rosemary Deller for information about 'Visual Methodologies': editors@gjss.org
Email special edition editors Maya Nitis, Marianna Szczygielska and Whitney Stark for more information about 'The Conditions of Praxis' edition: gjss.vol10.iss2@gmail.com.

You can access these Call for Papers on our website (www.gjss.org). Here, you can also find our latest edition, 'Theorising Futurities', on the way in which the social sciences have explored the question of 'the future'. We hope it proves of interest!

Best wishes

Visual Communication Journal
Special Issue
DIFFERENCE AND GLOBALIZATION

Co-edited by GIORGIA AIELLO (University of Leeds) and LUC PAUWELS (University of Antwerp)

This special issue investigates the nexus of globalization and visual communication through a rich discussion of the significance of national, racial, gendered, classed, countercultural, embodied and emplaced identities–among others. It will interrogate a variety of visual communication texts and contexts, including but not limited to those found in popular and consumer culture, web design, social media, advertising, photography, branding and public communication, tourism and urban place-making.

The visual is an especially privileged and in fact crucial mode of communication in contexts of globalization thanks to its perceptual availability and cross-cultural potential. The rise of global capitalism has been overwhelmingly associated with the increasing 'loss' of difference in cultural production. As a central issue in global interconnectivity, the key tension between homogenization and heterogenization has generated interest and apprehension over the preservation and disappearance of difference across cultures. Less attention has been given to how cultural and social difference may be mobilized for symbolic and material profit in global(izing) communication contexts, while also being a significant factor in the production and reception of texts. Although a critique of globalization as a homogenizing process is important and based on compelling evidence, it is therefore necessary to account for the increasingly complex, powerful and indeed heterogeneous ways in which contemporary communication is realized in everyday life.
We invite both article and visual essay submissions that address one or more of the following questions:

- What do theoretical, critical and/or empirical approaches to social or cultural difference and diversity contribute to visual communication scholarship on key processes of globalization?

- How can contemporary discussions of key articulations of difference and globalization (e.g. transnationalism, postcolonialism, cosmopolitanism) be enhanced by visual communication scholarship?

- What are some of the major ways in which global visual communication texts integrate, mobilize and/or exploit fundamental dimensions of social and cultural difference (such as race, gender, sexuality, class, nationality, political and religious beliefs, etc.)?

- What processes, forms of understanding, and practices are typical or required of designers’ work in the planning and production of visuals that aim to communicate generic meanings or, on the other hand, key forms of social and cultural difference to either global/cross-cultural or local/ specific publics?

- What are viewers’ culturally or socially specific experiences of global or cross-cultural visual communication and how do their unique ‘ways of seeing’ impact the ‘reading’ of globalization?

SUBMITTING YOUR PROPOSAL

Please send an extended 1,000 word abstract of your proposed article or visual essay describing the focus and content of the proposed contribution to GIORGIA AIELLO, G.Aiello@leeds.ac.uk, by 31 March 2013.

Proposals will undergo a review process, and a selection will be shortlisted for development into full-length articles or visual essays. Shortlisted authors must commit to a timeline for revision, resubmission and publication, with full manuscripts to be submitted by 1 October 2013.

The Daughter of Dawn

(This film came out while Flaherty was shooting Nanook)

‘Lost’ All-Native Film from 1920 Screens Again

Many classic films of the silent era, including some very popular ones, have been lost. But sometimes they come back. Such is the case with The Daughter of Dawn, a full-length silent picture from 1920 that was as good as gone — until a print turned up in 2005.

That’s when a private investigator in North Carolina phoned Brian Hearn, film curator at the Oklahoma City Museum of Art. The PI said he had received copy of a silver nitrate film as payment for a job; he hadn’t watched it but he believed it was The Daughter of Dawn. Hearn notified the Oklahoma Historical society which, with the help of other individuals and groups, restored the print over a period of several years. The film had its modern premiere at the deadCenter Film Festival in Oklahoma City.

The Daughter of Dawn was shot in the Wichita Mountains of southwest Oklahoma in 1920, and its cast was made up of some 300 Comanche and Kiowa Indians. The male lead was played by White Parker, and another substantial role was played by Wanada Parker — both of them children of the celebrated Comanche chief Quanah Parker. As described on the Oklahoma Historical Society’s website, the film "includes a four-way love story, two buffalo hunt scenes, a battle scene, village scenes, dances, deceit, courage, hand to hand combat, love scenes, and a happy ending. The Indians, who had been on the reservation less than fifty years, brought with them their own tipis, horses, clothing, and material culture.”

The entire film is about Indians and includes two scenes of buffalo hunts; at no point do cowboys or the U.S. cavalry intrude. It was written and directed by Norbert Myles, who was hired by Richard Banks of the Texas Film Company, who was apparently an expert in Native culture. On the cover of the script (which survived through the years even though the film was thought lost) Myles wrote “This story has been made possible by R.E. Banks, whose knowledge of the Indian, and of his traditions, was gained during the twenty-five years that he lived with them.”

For the actors, the chance to recreate Indian culture as it had been within their recent past must have been bittersweet. It had been just 45 years since Quanah Parker had surrendered, in 1875, at Ft. Sill, ushering in the reservation era for the Comanche. “A lot of these people were pre-reservation Indians, who had been wandering free out on the Plains,” Bob Blackburn, executive director of the Oklahoma Historical Society, told The Oklahoman. “Some of the people in that movie were in their 60s and 70s. They would have been young warriors out on the battle trail. … And here they are depicting warriors again in their own gear, with their own tepee. That affects me every time I talk about it.”

COMMUNITY MEDIA AROUND THE WORLD

Waves of Change: The Many Voices of the Global Village is a multimedia project designed to survey community media around the world by compiling and archiving the creative use of participatory communication globally. Waves of Change acts as a platform to share pieces that in many cases are not seen beyond the locale of their production. Independent and community media can become sustainable by building a shared presence, using innovative and creative strategies and by developing national and regional regulations that support democratic media. Some examples of the types of posts we include are:

- Communities using media in their struggles for land, human rights, representation, and cultural autonomy (La Minga Popular - Colombia, 2008)
- Collaboration and convergence of internet and radio in rural villages (Interviews with Women from the Deccan Community Media Trust - India, 2010)
- Movements pushing for state, local, and global regulations to protect free speech and access to technology (Save MediAct! - South Korea, 2007) A central component of Waves of Change is a collaborative map, which profiles individual projects from their location on a world map, inverting the traditional top-down science of cartography by emphasizing what community media activists think is important and worth mapping.

We hope to make the map especially useful for the community of media makers both locally and abroad, by helping them learn, connect with, and collaborate on diverse projects. In this way, the concept of the project is fundamentally collaborative, and we appreciate feedback and participation! Waves of Change has been funded by The Media Justice Fund of The Funding Exchange, The Philadelphia Foundation, The Experimental Television Center, Art Matters and individual donors. Explore our website and let us know how we can make this project more useful for you!

COUNTRY AUCTION PROJECT AVAILABLE ON DVD

A Country Auction: The Paul V. Leitzel Estate Sale

By Bob Aibel, Ben Levin, Chris Musello, Jay Ruby, Milton Machuca color, 58/6/47 min, 1983/2012

A Country Auction Film Project, based on the ethnographic research of Robert Aibel, Chris Musello and Jay Ruby, consists of a trio of films covering a period of almost 30 years.

In 1983 three ethnographers and a documentary filmmaker collaboratively produced two films — A Country Auction and Can I Get A Quarter? — that documented ethnographic research conducted on estate sales held in a rural Central Pennsylvania community. Over the next 25 years, these films were screened in numerous film festivals, broadcast on public television, and reviewed in academic journals.
The consensus among the filmmakers was that few people appeared to comprehend their intentions in producing the films. In 2008 they decided to return to the community where A Country Auction was filmed and hold an anniversary screening. In addition, the four filmmakers came together for a critical discussion about the successes and failures of the original Auction film. This discussion became the basis of a third film, Reflexive Musings: A Country Auction Study Film.

Films on this DVD:

* A Country Auction: The Paul V. Leitzel Estate Sale (color, 58 mins, 1983) - watch a preview
  Produced and Directed by Bob Aibel, Ben Levin, Chris Musello and Jay Ruby
  An ethnographic film about an estate auction in a rural community in Pennsylvania. It examines the personal, social and economic processes involved when a family dissolves their homestead. The film portrays the auction process as integral to the social life of the community and as a method for a family and community to deal with the death of one of their members.

* Can I Get a Quarter? (color, 6 mins, 1983)
  Produced and Directed by Bob Aibel, Ben Levin, Chris Musello and Jay Ruby
  A short observation of the auction of objects that remained unsold after the all day sale of the real estate and possessions of Paul Leitzel as shown in the film, A Country Auction.

* Reflexive Musings: A Country Auction Study Film (color, 47 min, 2012) - watch a preview
  Produced and Directed by Milton Machuca and Jay Ruby
  A uniquely reflexive examination of the successes and failures of A Country Auction as an anthropological film. The four producers take part in a prolonged critical discussion of the original film.

FILM FESTIVAL ACADEMY

After only five months in gestation, the baby is born, and already screaming! The new, fully operational website of the Film Festival Academy is now up and running at www.filmfestivalacademy.net. All are very welcome to visit.

The Film Festival Academy is a credible, ethical, flexible and truly international community network platform for film festival professionals (and all other constituencies involved or interested in the film festival world, from academics working in the area and film critics to filmmakers, producers, distributors and more), providing a neutral space for knowledge exchange, vocational training and actual collaboration. It has been initiated in response to the explosive and exponenental growth of film festivals all over the world (6,000 and counting?!), over 80% of which are under ten years old, and the need for festival professionals to learn from one another and collaborate for mutual benefit.

The operation entails specially curated and specifically themed industry events run at and with international film festivals. The events are genuinely collaborative in nature, co-produced by the Film Festival Academy and the hosting festival or organisation. Our first event is in New York on 27th/28th September, in association with the New York Film Festival’s 50th edition; the second will be hosted by the Met Film School in London and will focus on student film festivals.

In parallel to these events, many online services and activities will include the events being accessible (whether via video broadcast, digital podcast or edited transcripts), various means of festival professionals’ interconnectivity (much like an industry-specific LinkedIn), a diverse range of publications related to film festivals (from academic and film critical texts to official industry reports and festivals’ catalogues), and daily film industry and festival news. The Film Festival Academy will thus be a truly unique operation as no other organisation has functioning online and offline means of delivering diverse services, activities and content, being truly of use to a very wide range of constituencies.

Do visit the website and JOIN NOW - it’s free!

THE GENERATION FOOD PROJECT

Across generations, across the world

Dear Friends,

Everyone knows we live with a broken food system, but often it is easier to focus on the bad news rather than the good. In fact, we are surrounded by communities that already know how to feed the world for our generation, and for generations to come. From Malawi to Michigan, people and organizations are building better ways to eat today so that all of us can eat well tomorrow. This knowledge demands to be shared and spread.

Changing the food system couldn’t be more urgent. All signs point to that conclusion, whether you consider the droughts, floods and fires caused by climate change, the rise in global food prices, or that the health effects of our current food system is predicted to shorten children’s lives. Better, SMARTER ways of growing food, and feeding the world are needed, now.

That’s why we’re developing a new documentary, book and multimedia project, called Generation Food.

NEW BOOK

American Documentary Film: Projecting the Nation
Edinburgh University Press
August, 2011

What key concerns are reflected in documentaries produced in and about the United States? How have documentaries engaged with competing visions of US history, culture, politics, and national identity?

This book examines how documentary films have contributed to the American public sphere—creating a kind of public space, serving as sites for community-building, public expression, and social innovation. Geiger focuses on how documentaries have been significant in forming ideas of the nation, both as an imagined space and a real place. Moving from the dawn of cinema to the present day, this is the first full-length study to focus on the extensive range and history of American non-fiction filmmaking. Combining comprehensive overviews with in-depth case studies, Geiger maps American documentary’s intricate histories, examining the impact of pre- and early cinema, travelogues, the avant-garde, 1930s social documentary, propaganda, direct cinema, postmodernism, and ‘new’ documentary. Offering detailed close analyses and fresh insights, this book provides students and scholars with a stimulating guide to American documentary, reminding us of its important place in cinema history.

NEW BOOK

Irish Sacred Defence Cinema Religion. Martyrdom and National Identity

“The eight-year Iran-Iraq war near the end of the 20th century renewed the horrors of the First World War near the start of the century – causing millions of casualties and untold devastation on both sides. It also resulted in a vigorous and dynamic cinematic output in Iran, producing some of the most ardent Islamist political movies, Shii-inflected spiritual films, and original theorization of what constitutes an ‘Islamic cinema’. Khosronejad has managed to amass an astute and fascinating anthology – the first in English – that brings together an international roster of scholars to deal with the complexities and varieties of war fiction films, documentaries, television series and auteur directors.” Prof. Hamid Naficy Northwestern University

While the cinema of post-revolutionary Iran is internationally acknowledged, the world outside Iran has been ignorant of the Iranian war films that are the subject of this pioneering book. Over 200 Iranian feature films concentrating primarily on fighting and military operations have appeared since the 1980s and the beginning of the war between Iran and Iraq. This book presents a detailed exploration of the ‘Sacred Defence cinema’ established by Seyed Morteza Avini, a cinema that directly connects this war to the faith and religious belief of volunteer guardians of the revolution. These films remain the primary vehicles of the Islamic state in Iran for the preservation and memorization of the theme of martyrdom. As the distinguished film scholar, Hamid Dabashi writes in his Foreword to the book: ‘If national cinemas are predicated on national traumas, in the volume that Pedram Khosronejad has put together we are at the heart of Iranian cinema.’

Playing to the Camera: Musicians and Musical Performance in Documentary Cinema
Wallflower Press
March, 2012

Playing to the Camera is the first full-length study devoted to the musical performance documentary. Its scope ranges from rock concert films to experimental video art featuring modernist music. Unlike the ‘music under’ produced for films by unseen musicians, on-screen ‘live’ performances show us the bodies that produce the sounds we hear. Exploring the link between moving images and musical movement as physical gesture, this volume asks why performance is so often derided as mere skill whereas composition is afforded the status of art, a question that opens onto a broader critique of attitudes regarding mental and physical labor in Western culture.
Events marked with bold are those still open for entries.
